An Austrian Army Officer

The N. Y. Evening Post said on January 12th, 1918, "'Menchen im Krieg' (Men in War) has not yet been translated . . . it is a book that is notable among the war's great literary products. Its vitality exceeds that of our present best sellers. . . . 'Le Feu' (Under Fire) is realism, 'Menchen im Krieg' is artistic realism. From it we get a total impression that is more complete than that suggested by Barbusse."

"The war has inspired two masterpieces: 'Under Fire' by the French soldier Barbusse and 'Men in War' by the Austrian officer, Andreas Latzko, an even more poignant interpretation of the effect of the war on human beings than Barbusse's novel. This book is announced for publication March 15th."—N. Y. Evening Mail, February 23rd, 1918.

TRADE SECRETS AND THE BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION

THE well-founded stand of President Wilson against secret practices in international affairs invites question as to the utility of the whole brand of whispered relationships in human dealings. Especially does this apply to the intricate and manifold details of business, where, in fact, notable steps have already been taken in the direction of abolishing secrecy. It was the practice in the past for each man to regard his business as not only sui generis but as something peculiarly his own. The great growth of business literature in the last quarter-century, however, typified by a magazine like System, reveals how far we have gotten from the first of these assumptions to-day when business men in hundreds of different lines go to a common source of ideas poured out in turn by other business men like themselves; while the Federal Trade Commission, the Sherman law, and present wholesale experiments in the regulation and control of private business by the government mark only too well the exodus of the feudal idea of a business as the sole property of its proprietor.

As in many respects the least skilled of the many links in the economic life of the nation the retailer has been the last to recognize the advantages of openly co-operative, as opposed to narrowly competitive, methods. He has figured, by a natural logic, that every time a customer crosses a rival dealer's threshold it is a blow to his own business, forgetting that two together, even tho nominally rivals, are very frequently stronger than the same two alone. It is significant in this connection that in Germany, where trade had before the war reached the highest state of efficiency to be found in any quarter of the world, there was also the most highly perfected system of co-operative trade organization; and, working this analogy backwards, there would seem to be something more than a chance relationship between the facts that such a comparatively undeveloped industry as the American book-trade should have no trade organization of publishers and considerably less than half a thousand members in its national retail association.

Elsewhere in this issue appears an account of how six department stores in the Middle West have banded together for informal monthly conferences on common merchandising problems. At these conferences they discuss the most intimate details of their businesses, the specific subjects to be taken up being announced in advance and each store furnishing its complete figures and experience bearing on these problems. One store is saving over $1000 a year in a single department as the result of one of these conferences. On another occasion the "Little Six"—as these stores each doing a business of from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 a year call themselves—solved the problem of why one of their number was carrying his corset department at a loss. It was thought for a while that the group could engage in co-operative buying to advantage but this was later abandoned and the "Little Six" continues to-day to prosper as a business clinic pure and simple.

That it should prosper is not surprising. The amazing thing is that it ever got started. The hardest obstacle the organization had to contend with was the false pride of the merchants. "Often a merchant would realize that one of his departments was a money loser, but he would dislike to admit it, as he felt it was a reflection on his ability. It took some time before the members all overcame this feeling and were willing to be frank with the others, even with the promise of increased profits as a reward. After a few meetings, however, this feeling was overcome, and then co-operation was in full swing."

Whether due to similar false pride or to a fault much more fundamental, the retail book-trade is particularly clam-like as to the details of its common operations, if we are to judge from the difficulty experienced by System in its attempt of last year to investigate as one of a series of business building articles the common details of conducting a bookstore.

Nor was this reticence due to the fact that System is an extra-trade agency. Booksellers exhibit this same self-conscious non-communicativeness as to the vital details of book-selling even "in the bosom of the family." Nothing better illustrates this point than the inevitability with which the annual convention stresses direct selling and other notes in the other fellow's eye to the exclusion of such obstructive beams as inadequate cost finding methods and unskilled assistants in the retailer's own eye.

President Macauley, in his call for more members for the American Booksellers' Association, elsewhere in this issue, puts his finger on the root of this whole evil of trade secrecy and indifference in the book-trade when he says: "Don't ask, 'What has the Association done for me?' . . . but, 'What have I done for the Association?'" The American Booksellers' Association can never thrive, as a collective organization or in its units, if its membership is made up in chief part of those who come to its conventions either from a sense of duty or just to get something out of the convention. One of the difficulties in the past has been that the general discussion at the convention centered around a little group of men while the mass of the membership sat by and listened. Steps were taken last year to obviate this difficulty by breaking up the attendance into groups devoted to the discussion of stated problems. These intimate and informal conferences are provocative of just the sort of frank discussion most needed in the trade and it is to be hoped that this feature has not been overlooked in preparing the program for the coming convention soon to be announced. The need for this getting down to a frank discussion of trade fundamentals along the lines of the business clinic conducted by the department stores cited above is all the greater this year because of war-time conditions, for as a prominent retailer wrote recently: "This is the year when of all times the bookseller needs every help that he can get . . . a year full of perplexities."

IT is with wide sympathy that the trade will learn of the sorrow which has come to Mr. Frank N. Doubleday on his trip to the Orient in the death of Mrs. Doubleday in Canton, China. Mrs. Doubleday seemed in full health when they left in December and her death is reported to have come quite suddenly as the result of an apoplectic stroke. She is known to the trade as an author under the pseudonym of "Neltje Blanchan," a name inherited from her Holland grandmother, and her charming books, "Nature's Garden" and "Bird Neighbors," which initiated her series, were in good part the modest foundation of the Doubleday business. Mrs. Doubleday had an attractive and forceful personality, pleasantly reminiscent of her nature writings.

ANOTHER instance of the willingness of the trained library worker to assist the bookseller in the work of putting the best books into the homes in his city was furnished during the past holiday season when the children's department of the Detroit Public Library donated the services of members of its staff to three local bookstores, Macauley's, Dennen's and Sheehan's, to help advise parents in the selection of books for children. These librarians were in the bookstores from 9:30 till 12:30 every morning from December 1 to 22 and, while they were there primarily in an advisory capacity, they proved, according to Mr. Macauley, most effective salesmen.

ARE THERE ANY RETAIL TRADE SECRETS?

How six merchants in the Middle West are answering this question is told in the following suggestive article by Johnson Heywood in a recent issue of "System":

DELIVERY expenses were running so high for a department store in Ohio that profits were being seriously cut into. The management faced the necessity of reducing the delivery costs or limiting the service. Competition was so keen that any reduction of delivery service might easily be equivalent to going out of business. But as a matter of fact this desperate remedy was not even considered. Instead, five letters were written to five other department stores located in cities from Des Moines, Iowa, on the west to Youngstown, Ohio, on the east.

In less than a week the officers of this store had before them, in tabulated form, complete information as to the kind and number of trucks used, the loading and routing methods, the cost of labor and supplies and detailed information covering the cost and the methods of the five other delivery departments. With this information it was easy for them to see that the carts they were using were too expensive to operate and maintain. This was the only shortcoming of their delivery service and they thereupon sold their equipment and replaced it with lighter trucks better adapted to city hauling.

THE BEGINNING OF THE "LITTLE SIX"

The information brought forth by the five letters was invaluable and yet it cost only postage. It was made possible by the appreciation of the value of "other men's ideas" held by the owners of these six department stores. This desire to know how the other man manages is the idea back of the "Little Six," as the group of stores calls itself. The organization was conceived by two of its present members, several years ago at a trade convention, during a hotel lobby chat at which one of them commented that trade conventions would be much more valuable if generalities could be gotten away from and the discussion brought down to brass tacks. It was apparent that the merchants were so situated that none of them would give out actual figures.

"How much business are you doing in dress goods?" one would ask.

"More than ever before," the answer would probably be.

"Well, what is your selling expense in that department?"

"Oh, about 3%."

This is a fair sample of the way many merchants exchange business information.

So these two men decided to get together and give each other any information they had. This interchange was to cover methods, merchandise, and actual figures; nothing was to be withheld.

At first this was as far as the arrangement went, but soon it became evident that it would be well to get together in person, study each other's store, talk over methods, analyze costs and let department heads of the two stores confer. They did not make a secret of what they were doing and little by little other far-sighted merchants asked to be admitted. Now there are six stores in the group. The smallest of them does a business of about $1,000,000 a year; while the gross sales of the largest go well over $2,000,000. Obviously, to be of value, there must not only be the utmost confidence between the members, but they must overcome any false pride that might keep one of them from admitting that his methods of doing business were not necessarily the best. As a result of the openmindedness that developed, there have been big savings and improvements for each store.

HOW THE PLAN WORKS

Here's an instance, a saving for one store of over $1000 a year in a single department. It was made in a department of which the owner was very proud, too. At a meeting of the heads of this department from the six stores, it was found that one of them was not getting a trade discount of 5% to which he was entitled and which all the other stores were getting. On demanding it, the saving of $1000 was effected.

The exchange of figures and the meetings run on schedule now. First there is the 15-day report of sales, which is mailed by each member to all the others twice a month. It is a comparison of the 15-day period for the current year with the same period of the preceding year of sales by departments. It shows

NO "TRADE SECRETS" HERE

Figures like these are exchanged without reserve regularly among the six members. Tabulated in this way, they enable any one of the six to compare the results he is obtaining in detail with the other five.

charge sales, cash sales, collections on account, total accounts outstanding, and the average amount outstanding for each account. With these figures for six localities before him, from stores of the same general kind as his own, a merchant can tell much about the health of his business.

If he finds that his charge sales, say, are greater in proportion to total sales than those of the other stores, it may be that his credit man is getting too lax. The report also reveals any letting down in collections. If all the reports show the same condition it is apt to signify a general downward tendency of business in that section of the country. Since these reports are made twice a month, any wrong condition is caught before it can affect profits seriously.

OTHER RETAIL "SECRETS" LAID BARE

Another report turned in regularly is the monthly comparison sheet. This sheet shows whether each department is increasing its sales as it should, judged in comparison with what the other stores are doing. It shows whether stocks are being kept up and if there is a tendency toward overstocking.

The most intimate set of figures regularly exchanged is the "yearly departmental statement." This gives every important figure bearing on any of the selling departments of the business for the year. With these tables for five stores besides his own, a merchant can quickly find the weak spots in his methods if there are any.

There is one other regular report which the stores exchange. It shows the selling cost in percentage for each department by months. The seasonal fluctuations in each department are thus made apparent and the report often indicates where and when it would be well to transfer temporarily certain employees from one department to another.

TALKING IT OVER

The exchange of these reports, of course, is only part of the activities of the "Little Six." Perhaps even more is accomplished thru the monthly meetings which are held in rotation at the various stores. These meetings are attended by the proprietors and educational directors of the stores, and often by heads of departments. At each meeting some specific subject—deliveries, returned goods, or the like—is taken up for discussion. If some important question has arisen in the preceding month, that is often the subject chosen. For example, the incident of delivery costs has already been mentioned. The meeting following the request for information was given up to a discussion of the figures. In this way more detailed information as to ways and means was brought to light.

If a subject is not suggested in some such way, the "host" of the coming meeting announces the subject and will often cover the subject by means of a questionnaire. This starts the members thinking along the line suggested, so that they come to the meeting primed with questions and with interesting figures and methods of their own.

As suggested before, nearly always the members of the "Little Six" take the heads of certain departments with them to the meetings. For instance, one month the heads of the six cloak and suit departments may go, another month perhaps the furniture department heads will attend. These department heads hold a separate meeting and after threshing out their individual problems report to the meeting of the owners. Here the whole matter is gone over. The meetings seldom take up more than one day. At first it was thought that the "Little Six" organization could be used as a basis for co-operative buying, but that did not prove successful. There was too much variation in the patronage of the different stores, with a corresponding difference in the goods demanded by customers.

BUYING HINTS

Altho co-operative buying is not now attempted, a valuable function of the organization is the interchange of buying information. The store which found that it was entitled to a 5% discount which it was not getting has already been mentioned. Information as to sources of supply is interchanged, also, thus often opening up valuable new markets.

Almost any buyer is likely to get into buying ruts sometimes. He may have found that a certain supplier has furnished satisfactory goods and service and he perhaps does not realize that other better sources have developed. By knowing where his associates in the "Little Six" buy, he often gets in touch with better supply houses.

The buyers find it helpful, too, to know what makes of goods are being carried by other stores, which are the most popularly priced, which are the best sellers and so forth. All of this information is exchanged and freely discussed.

FALSE PRIDE BIGGEST OBSTACLE

Lack of confidence was the easiest obstacle the merchants in this organization had to overcome. False pride was the hardest. Often a merchant would realize that one of his departments was a money loser, but he would dislike to admit it, as he felt it was a reflection on his ability. It took some time before the members all overcame this feeling and were willing to be frank with the others, even with the promise of increased profits as a reward. After a few meetings, however, this feeling was overcome, and then co-operation was in full swing.

One member knew that his corset department was losing money. At an auxiliary meeting of the six corset department heads, the trouble was found. This meeting amounted to a consultation of five "physicians" over a severe case of business sickness. After analyzing figures, stock, and methods, the cause of the trouble was located in the stock. The "patient" had been carrying too many makes of corsets without a sufficient price range. On returning to his store the corset man held a sale, cleaned up his stock, and now handles only a few lines, but offers an assortment of corsets that fits more pocket-books.

Sometimes, again, one of the merchants may have tried a department in his store that did not show a profit, and then discontinued it. Or he may never have put it in, for some reason or other. Several members of the "Little Six" have started profitable new departments on the strength of good showings made by these departments for other members.

There is frequent interchange of local newspapers among the stores, so that each may have the benefit of the others' ideas on advertising. This results in a much better grade of copy, as the results from each advertisement are also stated.

When one store tries out an innovation the others are given the benefits of the lessons learned from it. Perhaps the most outstanding example of this was the installation of an educational department for salespeople in one of the stores. The results were so good, and showed so plainly on the reports in decreased selling expense, that the other five stores put in educational departments.

One store tried out a plan of boosting dress goods sales thru installing a sewing school in the store. The plan was simple enough. A sewing teacher was engaged to give customers a 15-lesson course in dressmaking, covering five weeks, for a tuition charge of $1 for the course. The course was advertised in the daily papers, and many women took advantage of the opportunity. The low tuition covered the entire expense, including the teacher's salary and the advertising. There was a marked increase in sales in several departments that was largely credited to this effort. After its success had been proved, the merchant who had tried it gave the details to the others of the "Little Six," and they also got the benefit of the sales boosting plan.

ALL OF "LITTLE SIX" THRIVING UNDER PLAN

As would be expected among already successful merchants, there have been few spectacular or revolutionary changes made in methods or policies by this interchange of information; yet the increase in profits and the improvement in methods have been steady and important. It has come thru the cumulative effect of individually small savings and betterments. Much of the interchange of ideas is done by correspondence outside of the regular meetings.

The idea back of the "Little Six" is not new. Many trade associations have for years been working to get and give just such co-operation. Most business men nowadays would like to get the figures and methods back of the other man's success that will not harm the co-operators competitively, and realize that if they could they would benefit. But the sticking point seems to be the fear of each man that if he gives up his figures the other man will in some way, that usually is not quite clear, use these figures against him. Confidence, therefore, has been essential to the success of the "Little Six"—a success which obviously many other concerns, large or small, could duplicate thru similar organizations for interchanging data. And every member quickly comes to realize that he must not believe that because a method is his, it is the best. False pride doesn't put profits on the ledger.

WHY BOOKSELLERS SHOULD BELONG TO THE A. B. A.

By Ward Macauley.

YOU, Mr. Bookseller, ought to belong to the American Booksellers' Association. This applies whether you are satisfied with what the Association has accomplished or not. The only way in which an organization of this kind can really succeed is when it is to a large extent representative of the entire trade. Our organization is small. Your support is urgently needed. When we say support, we do not mean merely your dues. We mean your moral backing for the projects which the Association undertakes. A membership well distributed thru the various states will enable the officers of the Association at any time to get an accurate expression of trade feeling and where desirable to convey such expression to publishers and others who may need such information for their guidance. Our very resolutions, whether directed to Congress in behalf of remedial legislation or to publishers asking trade re-adjustment, often lack force because of comparatively restricted membership.

WHAT THE ASSOCIATION HAS DONE AND CAN DO

The Association feels that it deserves support on the score of accomplishment—not that the present officers are making claims on this point—but that thru the patient effort of a small group of men, such a great trade reform as the net price system became a fact. Bookselling trade conditions are immensely better than they were seventeen years ago. They may easily become immensely better yet if thru greatly increased membership we can really approach true community of effort. We are not—absolutely not—going to solve any great trade problems by individual effort exclusively in our own stores. We cannot say that general conditions do not affect us. How business is done in each individual bookstore is decided by the general country-wide policies of publishers, booksellers and allied interests.

The moment you join the A. B. A. it becomes your Association. You have an equal voice with every other member in determining policies, in deciding upon activities. You are accorded every opportunity in the annual convention and in the A. B. A. Bulletin to express your judgment, to urge your recommendations. Resolutions carried at the conventions are the guide-posts for your officers and committees.

It is sometimes felt that the Association should be able to prevent every form of price-cutting and to apply drastic remedies when price-breaks crop up. No effort in the way of price agreement is at present legal and while the Association stands strongly for fair and reasonable net prices consistently maintained to all customers alike, which we believe to be the only honest business, we cannot interfere with or punish the man who believes in and practices cut prices whether for advertisement or other motive. The only remedy that is apparent on the business horizon just now is in the Stevens bill, which the Association has consistently supported. This legislation provides reasonable protection to the dealer and to the manufacturer and is in the interest of the equality of the customer. In his admirable book, "Business Competition and the Law," Charles H. Montague well urges the importance of refraining from any effort that savors of price-fixing. If the Association does not come to your rescue when beset by price-cutting, this should not belittle the constructive work which the Association is trying to do.

A PRIVILEGE—AND AN OBLIGATION

Your membership in the Association will cost you ten dollars per year. You can afford it. If the men who thru these long 17 years have afforded not only to pay dues but to devote hours and days and weeks to work that benefits you just as much as it does them, you can afford the money. More, you can afford time in the Association's interest, if called upon. If the membership greatly increases, one of two things can be done: the dues may be reduced or the work of the Association greatly extended. Your officers well realize the good that might be done by an active employed secretary or manager devoting all his time to associational work. A doubled membership makes this possible.

Don't ask, "What has the Association done for me?" (tho that is worth thinking about), but, "What have I done for the Association?"

A great deal of hard work has been performed by the officers of the Association. The results are not perhaps as large as we have hoped—but they are going to be! Will you not help us to make the American Booksellers' Association a real organized force for better bookselling by becoming a member this very day?

Take this as a personal letter and say yes just as graciously as you would if, with the above facts before you, you were being solicited face to face.

Mail your application to the offices of the Association at 78 Library Ave., Detroit, Mich.

DISCOUNTS AND ROYALTIES ON BOOKS FOR CAMP LIBRARIES

THE latest number of the Bulletin of the Authors' League of America contains the following self-explanatory communication from Ferris Greenslet of Houghton Mifflin Co. on the question of discounts and authors' royalties on books sold to camp libraries:

I have just happened to see, somewhat belatedly, a short article in the November number of the Bulletin of the Authors' League dealing with the matter of royalties on books purchased by the American Library Association for use in Camp Libraries. There are in the article one or two statements that do not perfectly coincide with the facts as we know them, and in consequence, as it seems to me, certain unsound deductions.

I am venturing, therefore, since the house of Houghton Mifflin Company was one of those suggesting that the authors involved take royalty upon the half-price actually received, to state certain facts, together with our point of view thereupon:

(1) The publishers of the country are not, I believe, a unit in making the sales to camp libraries at 50 per cent from list. I understand that in many cases the discount allowed is only the ordinary maximum trade discount of 40 per cent. In such cases, of course, the question of reduction of authors' royalties would not arise.

(2) I do not think it is true that books are ever in ordinary practice sold at so high a discount as 50 per cent from list. Most of the orders of the American Library Association are for 78 copies. The maximum trade discount on this number would be 33 1-3 per cent plus 5 per cent.

(3) Most of the books selected for use in the camp libraries are, of course, by the more popular and successful authors, and carry, therefore, under the contracts in most cases maximum royalties—15 and 20 per cent.

(4) The article in the Bulletin did not take account of what is perhaps the most important factor in the situation, and the factor upon which we ourselves endeavored to lay the greater stress in consulting our authors as to their views, i. e., the very great increase in the past year in the cost of manufacturing, owing (a) to the increased cost of materials, (b), to the increased cost of labor. In our preliminary study of the question we found several instances where a 20 per cent book manufactured at current rates and sold at 50 per cent off the list price of 1917 would have left the publisher with no margin whatsoever.

(5) The suggestion of one of your auctorial correspondents, that the author's royalty should be reduced in the same proportion as the price to the American Library Association is below the usual trade price, would be fair to both parties only if it were also further reduced in the proportion that manufacturing costs in the autumn of 1917 were higher than the average similar cost for, say, a five-year period. This, however, would, of course, involve an amount of expert accounting hardly warranted by the amount involved either in any single instance or in the aggregate. It is quite possible that in isolated instances of books at a low royalty the arrangement of 50 per cent. off from list and royalty paid the author upon the price obtained may have put the greater sacrifice on the author. I believe, however, that taking the average of all the sales made to camp libraries, this arrangement works out equitably, and that under it both author and publisher do their bit on practically even terms.

SECRECY IN WAR MATTERS REQUESTED BY GOVERNMENT

PUBLISHERS of books and magazines are cautioned against the inadvertent publication of military information of possible value to the enemy in a notice sent out by the Bureau of Public Information in Washington on February 21. As a precautionary measure publishers are asked to submit manuscripts to the Bureau before publication.

The text of the notice is as follows:

"For the protection of the military operations of the United States it is urgently requested that publishers consult with the Government previous to the publication of any information relating to military or naval affairs. Publishers are especially cautioned against the publication, without official advice, of any books, pamphlets, folders, photographs, maps, charts, or any printed or pictorial matter dealing with military or naval strategy, tactics, or operations. The inadvertent publication of military information, especially of new methods of warfare and of new designs, formulas, and constructions of military material, may give valuable aid to the enemy.

"The Committee on Public Information is designated by the War and Navy Departments to advise with publishers and writers in the administration of the voluntary censorship. Manuscripts or proofs submitted to the Committee on Public Information will be read and returned to the writer or publisher with such recommendations as the Government may desire to make for the preservation of proper military secrecy. The committee takes no responsibility for the accuracy or general propriety of matter submitted to it. Its purpose is merely to aid publishers in their desire to prevent valuable military secrets from falling into the hands of the enemy.

"All manuscripts, proofs, photographs, drawings, etc., should be submitted in duplicate."

RECENT FRENCH BOOKS

Special Correspondence to the "Publishers' Weekly" from the Société d'Exportation des Editions Francaises.

THERE has been a white-hot intensity about the war books that have come out of France that is causing publishers in both England and America to comb the new French output carefully for possible "finds." How popular certain of these works are proving in the original is instanced by the statement of the head of the French department in one New York bookstore that he has sold no less than two thousand copies of Barbusse's "Le Feu" and something like one thousand of Gerald's "La Guerre, Madame." While, however, war books have been, perhaps, a more conspicuous feature of the literary output of France than of any of her allies—and with good reason!—the publishing of scholarly works in other fields, tho greatly hampered by labor and manufacturing difficulties, has not by any means ceased.

SOME RECENT WAR BOOKS

Among the recent war books of interest is "Ceux de l'An 14" (Ernest Flammarion, Paris, frs. 3,50), short stories of actual incidents in the war told by Georges d'Espèrès, author of "La Légende de l'Aigle," in his characteristically vivid and illuminating style. He not only describes the thrilling charges of cuirassiers and the heroism of infantry storming the enemy trenches with fixed bayonets, but also the more prosaic duties of artillerymen, and the hard and dull work of doctors tending the wounded in the gloomy dug-outs. Among the most striking of the incidents in which the book abounds are the account of "The Defence of the Farm," the pathetic story of an old farmer who shoots his wife and daughter and then himself rather than fall into the hands of the Germans, and "The Best Gunman," the tragic story of an artilleryman, who, a priest by profession, is rent between his soldier's duty, which commands him to point his cannon at a church where Bavarian soldiers have put up an observatory, and his religious duty, which forbids him to destroy the House of the Lord.

André C. H. A.'s book, "Au-dessus des Batailles," the note book of an aviator, (Arthème Fayard, Paris, frs. 3,50) is well worth reading. The author is a poet as well as an aviator, and the poetic element is present in his descriptions of floating above the earth in the stillness of the morning and of groping about in the darkness of night raids.

Georges Goyau's "Le Cardinal Mercier" (Perrin & Cie, Paris, frs. 2) is a tribute to the splendid figure of the Cardinal whose scholarly life at Louvain as professor of philosophy was interrupted by the war.

The philosophy of the war and of the after-war is the subject of two stimulating books: "Hier et Demain, Pensées Brèves" by Dr. Gustave Lebon (Flammarion, Paris, frs. 4) in the series Bibliothèque Scientifique and Jean Finot's "L'Agonie et la Naissance d'un Monde" (Flammarion, Paris, frs. 4). Both books oppose the German political ideas, but in regard to the future Dr. Lebon is pessimistic, seeing a world doomed by economic forces and national misunderstanding, with a general tendency toward complete militarism, and the sole hope a possible faith and human love which if they ever came would dominate human interests; Finot, on the other hand, points out that racial prejudices will completely disappear, that militarism and materialism are gradually receding from the world, and backs up his optimistic philosophy by proofs from the present war.

GENERAL NON-FICTION

The last volume of Brunetière's "Histoire de la Littérature Française," number IV, XIX^e siècle (Delagrave, Paris, frs. 7,50; bound frs. 11) is at last ready. The text has been revised somewhat by Albert Cherel from notes taken down by the professor's students, and presents Brunetière's defense of classicism against romanticism represented respectively by Chateaubriand, Hugo, Vigny, Dumas, and Delavigne, Leconte de Lisle, Flaubert.

In the field of art and the book beautiful André Charles Coppier's "Les Eaux Fortes de Rembrandt" (Berger-Levrault, frs. 40) is a fine example of book making. The reproductions of Rembrandt etchings are accompanied by technical comments and appreciations by Coppier.

Political science is represented by Prof. Joseph-Barthelemy's "Démocratie et Politique Etrangère" in the Bibliothèque d'Histoire Contemporaine (F. Alcan, frs. 10). An eminent professor and jurist whose study of German autocracy was set forth in a previous book, Prof. Barthelemy defends democracy against the accusation that it is unfit for the management of foreign affairs. The latter part of the book is a brilliant summary of the democratic principles for which each of the allies is fighting.

A book written before the war but only lately published which will interest psychologists is "Le Subconscient Normal" by Edouard Abramowski, Bibliothèque de Philosophie Contemporaine (F. Alcan, frs. 7,50). It is not only a contribution to experimental psychology, but, as the writer is head of the Polish Psychological Institute at Warsaw, a decided tribute to France in that the text is in French. It is particularly for specialists and treats of experiments on memory illusions and the phenomena of telepathy.

"Les Universités et la Vie Scientifique aux Etats-Unis" (Armand Colin, Paris, frs. 3,50) by Maurice Caullery, French Exchange Professor at Harvard (1916), which has been very well received in France, will have a special interest for American readers who wish to see themselves as others see them. The book is a record of the French biologist's impressions of American university life gathered during his five months' sojourn at Harvard together with a history of American universities and technical schools. While M. Caullery praises many features of the American university—the fine esprit de corps that prevails among graduates, the advantages of self-government, the idealistic tendencies of American education and its human trend and highly moral qualities, he notes that American university students are "educated more than informed" and that they are treated more like boys than men.

A very timely work is the "Larousse Médical Illustré de Guerre," (Larousse, Paris, frs. 20), a supplement to "Larousse Médical Illustré," a collaboration under the direction of Dr. Galtier-Boissière. This work takes account of the great changes that the present war has brought about in medicine and surgery. It is written by physicians, surgeons and specialists, all in active service in military hospitals. The articles, which are classified in alphabetical order, include "The Reeducation of Mutilated and Blind Soldiers," "Aviation," "The Treatment of Soldiers Poisoned with Gas," "Mechanotherapy," and "The Treatment of Nervous Diseases."

Other notable books are: "Madame Vigée Lebrun" in the series, Les Grands Artistes (Henri Laurens, Paris, frs. 4), in which Louis Hauteceur analyzes the technique of the French painter and comes to the conclusion that she was never an original artist; "L'Alsace-Lorraine Doit-elle Rester Française?" (Delagrave, Paris, frs. 4) an affirmative answer to the question and a comprehensive survey of the Alsace-Lorraine situation by Abbé Wetterlé, who has lectured in Paris and America on the subject; and J. Toutain's "Notre Belle France: Sa Tradition Nationale; Son Rôle Historique" (Belin, Paris, frs. 3), a concise little handbook of French history from Vercingetorix to Napoleon, which should appeal to many American soldiers who are quartered in places where famous deeds were performed and important treaties signed.

Tho not new, Auguste Rodin's "Les Cathedrales de France" (Armand Colin, Paris, frs. 50, 70) commands attention just now both because of the author's recent death and of the timely interest of his subject matter, covering as it does the cathedrals of Reims, Soissons, Laon, Amiens, etc.

LESSON VIII Bibles

"I have just been reading the Bible," Emerson said to Thoreau.

"Which Bible?" was Thoreau's quick question. "The Vedas, the Zend Avesta, or the Hebrew Scriptures?"

Bible Versions

THERE are five versions of the Hebrew Scriptures in demand to-day:

Douai Version. 1582-1610. (Romanist.)
King James. 1611. (Authorized.)
Revised Version. 1881-1885.
Polychrome Bible. 1898.
Jewish Version. 1917.

DOUAI VERSION

The Douai Version was made in the town of Douai in Northern France. Modern editions of this version differ somewhat from the original, but the Bible used by Roman Catholics at the present day is, on the whole, the Douai translation. The Catholic Bible differs from the Protestant Bible not only in rendering but also in the order of the books, the titles of the books, and the number of the books. The books of the Apocrypha are accepted as canonical and appear in the Catholic Bible scattered among the various books of the Old and New Testament.

The peculiarity of the Douai Version, by which it is distinguished from Protestant versions, is the fact that it was translated from a Latin manuscript. The earliest manuscripts of the Old Testament are in Hebrew, and of the New Testament, in Greek. When Rome conquered the world, and Latin became the speech of the people, there was need of a translation of the Bible into Latin, into the vulgar language, or the language of the vulgus, the crowd. The Douai Version is a translation of the Latin translation which is called the Vulgate.

KING JAMES VERSION

The King James Version is known as the Authorized Version, altho, as a matter of fact, it was never authorized by the King. Later editions had printed on their title pages, "Appointed to be read in the churches," which probably gave rise to the legend of authorization. The King James Version was made during the lifetime of Shakespeare—the Golden Age of English literature.

REVISED VERSION

The Revised Version is a revision of the King James Version. It was made for two reasons:

1. On account of the discovery of fresh Bible manuscripts.

2. On account of the archaic character of the language of the King James Version.

1. When the King James Version of the Bible was made, there had not yet been discovered the three oldest manuscripts of the Bible extant to-day:

The Vatican manuscript (in the Vatican library, Rome),

The Sinaitic manuscript (discovered on Mt. Sinai, now in Petrograd),

The Alexandrian manuscript (in the British Museum).

The discovery of these three manuscripts gave to translators a Bible text older and more accurate than any they had had before, and so much new light was thrown on obscure passages in the Scriptures that a fresh translation was not only warranted but demanded.

2. So many words in the King James Version are obsolete, or have lost their original meaning, that modern readers no longer understand them in their intended sense. For instance: David prays the Lord to enlarge his feet. In the Revised Version, the word "enlarge" is changed to "set free." This original meaning of the word survives to-day in the phrase "at large," meaning "free."

The translators of the Revised Version did not put the Bible into modern English, other translators have done that, but they did revise archaic words which are misleading in sense at the present day.

The typography of the Revised Version was a great advance over that of the King James. The division of the Bible into verses, which was first made in the Genevan Bible of 1560, has the effect of breaking up the text into fragments and destroying the unity and continuity. The chapter divisions, which date from Wycliffe's Bible, are also badly done and misleading. Many chapters in the King James Version break off in the middle of the narrative and interrupt the argument. The arrangement of the Revised Version into paragraphs adapted to the subject is a great improvement. The numbering of the old verse divisions is retained for facilities of reference, but the printing of the text in separate verses is abandoned in every book except Proverbs. Another typographical improvement was made in the Revised Version by printing the poetical books of the Bible and occasional poetical passages in metrical form.

THE POLYCHROME BIBLE

The Polychrome Bible is the scholar's Bible. It is sometimes called the Rainbow Bible because it is printed in many (poly) colors (chrome). The different colors are for the purpose of showing the interwoven authorships and the composite character of the various books.

For instance: the first book of the Bible, Genesis, is made up of three different documents. The authors of these three narratives are known as:

The Jehovist (because he uses the name Jehovah rather than Lord),

The Elohist (because he uses the name Elohim for God),

The Priestly Writer (because there are clues to his being a priest).

Each of these writers is given a certain color, and the words of each are printed in that color thruout. The reader of Genesis can see at a glance that the Priestly Writer begins the narrative and breaks off in the fourth verse of the second chapter. At this point the change of color indicates that the Jehovist takes up the story and continues until his color ends.

The Polychrome Bible is unfinished. It was prepared under the auspices of Johns Hopkins University, but its completion was abandoned for lack of funds. It is published by Dodd, Mead & Company, and the following volumes are available:

The Book of Judges.	$1.25.
The Book of Psalms.	$2.50.
The Book of the Prophet Isaiah.	$2.50.
The Book of Leviticus.	$1.25.
The Book of Ezekiel.	$2.50.
The Book of Joshua.	$1.25.

It is worthy of special mention that the Book of Psalms was translated by the great Shakespearian scholar, Dr. Horace Howard Furness. The translation was made from the German of Wellhausen, and is highly esteemed both for its beauty and its accuracy.

THE JEWISH VERSION

The Jewish Version of the Bible is the youngest translation to-day, having been published in 1917 by the Jewish Publication Society of America. This is practically the first Jewish Bible in English. An earlier translation, made by Isaac Leeser in 1814, in Philadelphia, was a single-handed effort and was never widely read by the Jews. Up to this time the English Bible used by Jews has been either the King James Version or the Revised. Orthodox Jews have preferred the King James Version for the reason that it does not use the name Jehovah, the ineffable name that never occurs in the Jewish Version.

The Hebrew Bible is never called the Holy Bible but the Holy Scriptures. The word

"Bible" does not occur in the Bible itself. It came from the Greek, biblion, meaning "little book." The paragraphing of the Jewish Version follows that of the Revised Version. Verse divisions, uniform with those of the King James Version, are indicated in small type. The correspondence is in some cases approximate rather than identical, because the Hebrews divide the Old Testament into 24 books, while the Protestants divide it into 39 books. The order of the Hebrew Bible is also slightly different from the order of the Protestant. The Hebrew Bible ends with an incomplete sentence, the 23rd verse of II Chronicles, "let him go up." In the Protestant Bible the Book of Ezra follows after II Chronicles and completes the sentence, "let him go up to Jerusalem which is in Judah."

Besides selling the complete Bible in any one of these five versions a bookseller is often called upon to sell parts of the Bible which are published separately; such as the Pentateuch, the Psalter, the Apocalypse (the book of Revelation), or the Apocrypha.

THE APOCRYPHA

The Apocrypha is the name given to fourteen books which were written between 200 B. C. and A. D. 100, the period between the Old and the New Testament. The word "apocrypha" comes from a Greek word meaning "hidden," or "spurious." The Roman Church accepts the books of the Apocrypha as of like inspiration with the books of the Bible; the Protestant Church considers them of lesser inspiration, and excludes them from the accepted Canon.

In recent years, Biblical scholars have been turning their attention more and more to the study of the Apocrypha. The work of the Rev. Dr. R. H. Charles, Canon of Westminster, is noteworthy in the field. A little book by Dr. Charles, entitled "Religious Development Between the Old and the New Testaments" (Holt's Home University Library), is the most informing and interesting study of the Apocrypha that the lay reader can take up. There is no doubt that Protestants have, in the past, greatly undervalued the beauty and the wisdom of the Apocrypha, but every day they are coming to a better appreciation of it, and every day more copies of the Apocrypha are being sold.

There are the Old Testament apocryphal writings and the New Testament apocryphal writings. The latter are not included in the Bible, and the bookseller has few calls for them.

Another part or combination of parts of the Bible for which a bookseller is sometimes asked is that known as a Diatesseron. This is a combination of the four Gospels into a single and consecutive narrative. Such an interweaving of the words of the four Evangelists presents the story of the life of Jesus without the repetition and without the conflicting chronology of the separate accounts of the Gospels.

[The Lesson on Bibles will be completed next week.]

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
AND THOMAS NELSON & SONSIII. and IV. in the Series of Biographies of Leading Publishing Houses.

THE Oxford University Press and Thomas Nelson & Sons represent at once the oldest and most honorable traditions of the book-trade, each being over a century old, the former in fact dating back more than three centuries, and both being particularly notable for their Bibles and excellent series of classics.

The Oxford University Press

The Oxford University Press, alone among the presses of the world, is able to produce a list of all its publications for 325 years, dating its origin back to a time before the printing art was practiced in London and when the universities were the royally appointed guardians of the learning of Europe. The first books of the Press were printed in rented premises from type brought from Cologne—a far cry from the present Press in its beautiful building, with shady quadrangle and fountain; with provision for all the processes of book-making, including type founding and, at its own mill but two miles away, even the manufacture of the famous Oxford India paper.

The right of the University to print Bibles was first clearly admitted in the deed of 1637 by which that right was bartered away to the Stationers' Company for an annual payment. Cambridge had claimed the privilege under its much earlier charter, granted by Henry VIII and had printed several Bibles and prayer books; among these were prayer books printed in 1615, 1639 and 1660 and a Turkish New Testament in 1666, but it was not until 1675, after the Stationer's Company's license had lapsed, that the first complete Bible was issued. Among the remarkable Oxford Bibles are the famous Greek New Testament of Dr. J. Mill, 1707, the first to provide an apparatus criticus, the "Vinegar" Bible of 1717, so called from an error in the running title at St. Luke XX, which should have been "Parable of the Vineyard," the "Murderers" Bible of 1801, which has "murderers" for "murmurers" in Jude 15, the "Ears to ear" Bible of 1807 (Matt. XIII. 43), the "Wife-hater" Bible of 1810 ("wife" for "life" in Luke XIV. 26), the first Oxford Hebrew Bible, 1750, Dr. Blaney's Folio Bible, 1769, the Small Pica 8vo Reference Bible of 1824, a standard ever since, the Diamond 24mo Bible of 1842, the first book printed on real India paper, the polyglot English Bible of 1850. More recent Oxford Bibles of note are the famous "Revised Version" of 1881, the "Oxford Bible for Teachers," and the popular "Schofield Reference Bible" with its new system of connected topical references and helps, a new and improved edition of which has appeared since the first of the present year. There are now about one hundred different editions of Oxford Bibles. It is of interest in this connection to note that, so far as England is concerned, only the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and the royal printers are authorized to print the Bible—an enviable sort of monopoly indeed!

In 1688 the Oxford Press was divided into a Bible Press and a Learned or Classical Press and this division continued until 1883 when the two sides united under the control of Horace Hart, since deceased, with Henry Frowde, now retired, as publisher. Mr. Humphry Milford is now president of the Press, or Architypographus Academiae Oxoniensis as he is called. The whole business of the Press has been carried on since 1585, when the first board of delegates was elected, under the direction of the Delegates of the Press, a board composed of Heads of Colleges and other eminent members of the University.

Perhaps the most striking incident in the recent history of the Press was the publication of the "Revised Version" of the Bible, which was undertaken at the joint expense of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. Some American firms made strenuous efforts to obtain advance sheets of the "Revised New Testament," but without success. It was on May 17, 1881, that the "Revised Testament" was published, and the run on the Oxford University Press Warehouse was unprecedented; upwards of a million copies being issued by Mr. Frowde between midnight and midday. A Chicago newspaper printed the whole of the New Testament as a supplement, and so that the 'copy' might be set up in time the whole of the Four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, and the Epistle to the Romans, were telegraphed to Chicago from New York. The "Revised Version" of the entire Bible was issued on May 18, 1885, and altho ten thousand people had the handling of the volume ere it reached the public, no advance copies were obtained by anybody. One paper mill alone made sufficient paper for this edition to put a girdle round the globe one inch in thickness six times over, and the volumes piled flat would have reached a height of fourteen miles, or on end of seventy-four miles. The revision was completed in 1895, when the Apocrypha was issued in the late autumn.

Originally the publications of the Press consisted entirely of theology and ancient classics; now they embrace all kinds of books, from the "Oxford English Dictionary" to elementary school books.

The "Oxford English Dictionary" has been well described as the greatest engine of research of modern times, and as the greatest effort which any Press has taken in hand since the invention of printing. It was begun in 1882, and publication of the volume "Sti" to "Str" was noted in the Weekly Record for February 16. The cost of it, when completed, will be probably not less than £250,000; yet its price to the public does not exceed a half-penny a page.

Mention should also be made of the "Sacred Books of the East," now embracing with the Index no less than fifty volumes; the Oxford Classical Texts, numbering nearly sixty volumes; the Anecdota Oxoniensia; the series of botanical translations; the Oxford Higher and the Oxford Modern French Series; and, of course, the Clarendon Press general series of school books, which have long been familiar. The list also includes definitive editions of Gower, Chaucer, Spenser, Lyly, Campion, Marlowe, Johnson, Walpole, Blake, Shelley, Keats, etc. The Tudor and Stuart Library of reprints is a notable series; and the Oxford Library of Translations, chiefly of Latin and Greek classics, but also including Dante and Heine, has obtained the seal of public approval. "Wherever the tongue that Shakespeare wrote is read" the Oxford Poets series is familiar, as are also the carefully edited and low-priced reprints of standard authors, and the more recently added Oxford Library of Prose and Poetry and the World's Classics, of which at present 150 volumes have been published and several million copies sold. The Oxford catalog in the "Trade List Annual" is one of the most interesting literary storehouses to be found anywhere.

There are branches of the Oxford University Press in New York and Toronto, and depôts at Melbourne, Edinburgh, and Glasgow. The American branch was inaugurated in 1896 with the late John Armstrong as its head. Upon his death three years ago W. W. McIntosh, who has been with the Oxford University Press since 1870 and with the American branch since its founding, became vice-president—the president of the English house being the president here also—and William F. Olver became treasurer and Charles C. Schepmoos secretary.

Thomas Nelson & Sons

Altho not so old as the Oxford University Press, the Edinburgh house of Thomas Nelson & Sons is none the less justly famous for its more than a century of activity in the publishing of Bibles, educational books, juveniles and general literature in excellent inexpensive editions. In regard to the last named, the anecdote is told of an English boy who, when asked who Nelson was, replied, "The publisher of cheap books." The great Edinburgh plant, a model of its kind, occupies an area twice that of Madison Square Park in New York City and is the largest book plant in Great Britain.

The House of Nelson was founded 120 years ago by the son of an humble Scotch farmer. Of intensely religious Covenanting stock, the story is told by Curwen in his "History of Booksellers" of how young Thomas Nelson set out from home to seek his fortunes in the far-away Indies. His father accompanied him to Alloa, the place of embarkation, and during the journey asked him, "Have you ever thought that in the country to which you are going you will be far from the means of grace?" "No, father," replied the son, "I never thought of that; and I won't go." And immediately the journey was abandoned.

Young Nelson, like many another great publisher, happened upon his life-work by chance in the great London bee-hive. He had gone up as a youngster to make his way—and as luck would have it got his first work in a publishing house. Returning to Scotland in 1798 he rented a small shop, stocked chiefly with second-hand books, and began in a small way to issue the "Scots Worthies" and one or two other works in monthly parts. He removed shortly to the well-known shop at the corner of the West Bow, whence he began to issue cheap reprints in 24mo of such works as Baxter's "Saints' Rest," Booth's "Reign of Grace," "MacEwan on the Types," "Pilgrim's Progress," "Robinson Crusoe," "The Vicar of Wakefield," "Rasselas," and Goldsmith's "Essays." Thus early in its career did the House of Nelson become a pioneer in providing literature for the millions.

Nelson joined with a fellow bookseller in publishing the works of Paley, Leighton, Romaine, Newton, and others and the books were auctioned off in vacant shops thruout the larger towns and cities of Scotland and at the country fairs. In 1829 Nelson took the unusual step of sending out a traveler to call on the trade and in this way worked up a ready market for "Macknight on the Epistles," among other titles, a four volume octavo work.

The first great impulse to the business was given when Thomas Nelson's two sons, William and Thomas, entered the firm between 1835 and 1840. Between them, the two brothers increased the business so rapidly that in 1846 they were in a position to begin the erection of a great manufacturing establishment in Edinburgh.

The new Hope Park works were frequently extended until they formed three sides of a great square, and here machinery was gradually introduced until every operation in book manufacture was done upon the premises. The Hope Park establishment came to be recognized as one of the most important centers of industry in Edinburgh, and is spoken of by Mr. Bremner in his "Industries of Scotland" as the most extensive house in Scotland. It had by this time devoted itself to the production of books of travel and adventure for young people, and Mr. Thomas Nelson had initiated a series of school books which are famous even to this day.

On the evening of Tuesday, April 10, 1878, calamity overtook the busy works, for a fire within a few hours left the buildings a pile of smoking ruins. The fire involved a loss of nearly £100,000, but happily the stereotype plates, woodcuts and electrotypes were preserved, having been stored in fireproof safes. The disaster served to call forth the reserves of energy which characterized the Nelsons. It has been recorded of Mr. Thomas Nelson that he was actually telegraphing for new machines while the fire was still raging. A new Hope Park did not, however, arise from the ashes of the old. By the favor of the city authorities, temporary buildings were erected in the neighboring Meadows, but when the question of permanent rebuilding was considered it was decided to move the works to Parkside, at the base of Arthur's Seat, where more space was available. Here the famous Parkside works were erected under the most favorable conditions. Instead of the workrooms being piled in many stories round a congested square, they were spread over a large area and built in one story only, excellent lighting and ventilation being thus secured thruout the entire building. Since the removal to Parkside the history of the firm has been one of constant progress and expansion. In 1907 the New Factory, a model plant, was erected at one end of the Edinburgh grounds and here is concentrated the work of manufacturing the sixpence, sevenpence and shilling reprints.

As we have seen, religious books, school books and prize books were the staple productions of the firm when Parkside works were erected. These remained Nelsons' chief specialties until the death of Mr. Thomas Nelson, jr., in 1892. For some years after that the concern was in the hands of the trustees of his sons. Since the latter have entered the business its old features have been maintained, but the firm has in addition launched out into general publishing. Of recent years it has achieved success with popular libraries in what we might call "the Nelson size," $6\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ -in. In 1901 the New Century Library, containing the works of Dickens, Thackeray, Scott, etc., was published in this size on India paper. In 1903 the Sixpenny Classics (reprints of non-copyright books) began to appear, and in 1907 the firm began the publication of the Nelson Library at sevenpence, and they have established that price thruout the publishing trade as the standard for cloth reprints of copyright novels. A Shilling Library of copyright books in general literature followed, and then various foreign libraries including the extensive Collection Nelson of French classics and the Colección Espanola of Spanish classics. The excellent monthly history of the war by John Buchan is another of the notable Nelson ventures. It is stated that the normal output of the New Factory alone, devoted to manufacturing the inexpensive reprints, is from 125,000 to 200,000 volumes per week. The work goes on with the regularity of a great daily newspaper.

It was in keeping with all the best traditions of the house that Thomas Nelson, 3d, senior partner in the firm, should have laid aside his work early in the war to serve his country, and the announcement of his death in France last year was received with sorrow by the entire book-trade.

The Edinburgh house was the first British firm to establish a branch in the United States, and this branch, opened in 1854, has proved an important factor in the growth of the house, particularly on the Bible side. For a number of years, up to 1896, Thomas Nelson & Sons were agents in America for the Oxford Bibles. But in that year the arrangement with the Oxford University Press was cancelled by mutual consent, and the firm took up the work of Bible publishing in the United States on their own account. One of their most important undertakings in this direction was the publishing of the American Standard Revised Bible, an edition of the revised version that incorporated the readings and renderings proposed by the American members of the committee that began, in 1871, to revise and correct the version of 1611. This "American Standard Revised Bible" the American branch of Thomas Nelson & Sons have brought out in over 100 different styles, with and without critical apparatus, aids, illustrations and maps, printed on white paper and on Nelson's India paper. This excellent version has the warm endorsement of the churches and scholars of America, and so highly did it immediately come to be regarded that the American Bible Society, which at first waived the right to publish the revision in this country, has since amended its constitution to enable it to publish the "American Standard." The Nelson Bible business, both in the King James and the American Revised Versions, has grown rapidly and the nearly four hundred different styles of Bibles and Testaments form one of the most complete lines in the world. Booksellers should study carefully the Nelson catalog in the "Trade List Annual." A pamphlet, "The Wonderful Story of How the Bible Came Down Through the Ages," issued by the Nelsons gratis will also repay a careful reading.

Another interesting specialty of the American branch is the "Nelson Loose Leaf Encyclopaedia," a continuous encyclopaedia service supplying fresh material to subscribers several times a year.

Editor PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

We find that a number of the American publishing houses, when sending parcels by mail to Canada, figure the postage at the zone rate. We understand that Canada is not included in the zone rate, but that the postage on parcels sent by mail is straight eight cents per pound. We would be glad if you will kindly put a notice in the next number of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY regarding the above.

BOOK-TRADE ASSOCIATIONS

San Francisco Association Elects Officers

At the last meeting of the San Francisco and Bay Counties Booksellers' Association John J. Newbegin, sr., was elected president, Eugene Sommers, vice-president, and W. H. Boys, secretary, to serve during 1918.

A vote of thanks was given to the retiring officers.

During its brief existence the Association has already accomplished much good in bringing about a better feeling among those in the local trade and in correcting, with the help of eastern publishers, what threatened to be a serious attack on the net price system in California.

An effort is to be made this spring to increase the membership of the California State Booksellers' Association and plans are on foot to enlarge the scope of the present organization to include the various salespeople connected with the San Francisco, Oakland, and Berkeley stores.

Among the guests of the Association at the last meeting were William Edwards, representing Cupples & Leon Co., and Floyd Nourse, representing Platt & Nourse and Hurst & Co. They made short talks giving their impressions of the work of similar organizations in cities they visited on their western trip.

OBITUARY NOTES

IRVING W. ADAMS, son of L. W. Adams, traveler with Lothrop, Lee & Shepard, whose death was noticed briefly in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for February 16, fell in action while serving in the United States Army in France.

MRS. FRANK N. DOUBLEDAY, wife of the publisher, and author, under the pen name Neltje Blanchan, of many bird and nature books, died in Canton, China, on February 21. She and Mr. Doubleday had been traveling in the far East in the interests of the American Red Cross since December, and her death, caused by a sudden apoplectic stroke, came as a great shock to everyone. Her "Bird Neighbors" was one of the first books published by Doubleday, Page & Co. in the early days of its career. Mrs. Doubleday took an untiring interest in charitable works and was deeply interested in the Red Cross and Audubon societies. Besides "Bird Neighbors" she wrote the following books: "The Piegan Indians," 1889; "Birds that Hunt and Are Hunted," 1898; "Nature's Garden," 1900; "Our Wild Flowers and Their Insect Visitors," 1900; "How to Attract the Birds," 1902; "Birds Every Child Should Know," 1907; "The American Flower Garden," 1909.

EDWIN F. DILLINGHAM, the oldest bookseller in active service in New England, died in Bangor, Maine, on February 24th after a brief illness. Mr. Dillingham was born in Warren, Maine, in 1832, and when a boy of fifteen entered the employ of Col. David Bugbee, at that time the leading bookseller and stationer of the city of Bangor. He was admitted as partner in the business when twenty years of age and in 1889, on the retirement of the senior partner, he became the sole proprietor. During his long career he built up a book-selling business that became the leading one in the state and held this record for many years. He gave personal attention to business until within a few days of his death. He is survived by two sons and two daughters, one of the sons being Edwin L. Dillingham, sales manager of the subscription book department of Charles Scribner's Sons. His younger brother is Charles L. Dillingham, the widely known wholesale bookseller of New York, who retired from active service about three years ago.

PERSONAL NOTES

RUDYARD KIPLING has been appointed director of British propaganda in England.

C. ARTHUR SPURGEON, head of the House of Cassell, was knighted recently for his patriotic services since the war began.

FRANK MORRIS of the Morris Book Shop, Chicago, will preside at the smoker to be given by the Chicago Library Club to its members and guests on March 6 at the Atlantic Hotel.

F. J. SCHULTE, well-known to the trade as a publisher a quarter century ago, and founder of the Ariel Library, is now in charge of the editorial and advertising departments of Laird & Lee, Inc., Chicago.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES

IT IS ANNOUNCED that the joint Congressional investigating committee will recommend the purchase by the government of the leased pneumatic mail tube systems in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and St. Louis.

PRODUCTION of news-print paper was considerably reduced during January because of the fuel-restriction order and averaged 3750 tons a day against a normal 4500, as shown in the Federal Trade Commission's monthly review.

As "BAEDEKERS" are apt to be extremely slow moving stock for awhile the announcement this week that these books are particularly needed for soldiers abroad comes as a blessing to booksellers since it gives them a splendid chance to clean out this stock to patriotic customers.

PHILIP GOODMAN who recently made his entree into the publishing field will bring out in March his first books of the new year. The titles are "Damn! A Book of Calumny" by H. L. Mencken; "How's Your Second Act?" by Arthur Hopkins the noted theatrical producer; and "A Book Without a Title" by George Jean Nathan.

DURING THESE WAR-SPENT days it is a joy to be able to "forget" in those air castles where the heroine "lives happily ever after." Muriel Hines in "The Best in Life," just published by John Lane Co., reclothes an English drudge in the glories of a sudden gold mine and the proper appendages of Venetian nights and a hero.

In "Comrades," to be published shortly by Century, Mary Dillon has attempted to bring out the brotherhood of all the warring nations, and the resultant lasting peace which is inevitable. "There is not an exploit of the hero," says the author, "either in battle, in his flight as a prisoner, or in his experiences on the Lusitania that did not have its exact counterpart in the newspapers."

THE OPTIMISTIC TRADITION started by "Mrs. Wiggs" has been kept alive by various "Pollyannas" in the world of fiction, and Little, Brown has now published "Sunshine Beggars" by Sidney McCall. This time the good-cheer apostle is "Ma Giddings," plump and motherly, nor least of all the Bertollotis, whose tumble-down shack radiates beauty and love for Italian art which no amount of "beggar-ness" can dim.

SMALL, MAYNARD & Co. announce an increase in the price of the following novels by Ethel Sidgwick to $1.50: "Promise," "Le Gentleman," "Herself," "Succession," "A Lady of Leisure," "Duke Jones," "The Accolade," "Hatchways." The following four plays for children will also be henceforth $1.25: "The Rose and the Ring"; "The Goosegirl"; "The Goody-Witch"; "Boots and the North Wind."

"OVER HERE," Ethel M. Kelly's new novel, to be published this spring by Bobbs-Merrill, is only a reflection of the news items which one may read any day in any newspaper—the war bride: her romance. And this story of how one courageous girl solved her problem of love and sacrifice brings a forceful realization of the humdrum days that follow the first excitement and romance.

BARON C. BUFFIN'S "Brave Belgians" which was awarded the Audiffred prize by the French Academy of Moral and Political Science, has been translated from the French by Alys Hallard and recently published by Putnam. Each heroic defense is revived for the reader in a series of simply expressed narrative chapters from the resistance at Liège down to the victorious defense at the Yser.

FOR THEOLOGIANs as well as historians "Religions of the Past and Present" (Lippincott), edited by James A. Montgomery, will prove an interesting compilation of discourses on fourteen different religions. The editor, professor of Hebrew in the University of Pennsylvania, has treated the subject of Hebrew religion, and Morris Jastrow, author of "The War and the Bagdad Railway," discusses Babylonian and Assyrian religions.

A NEW ANGLE from which the subject of Lincoln has been developed by R. M. Wanamaker, Justice of the Supreme Court of Ohio, is shown in "The Voice of Lincoln," which the Scribners are publishing. The author has selected from Lincoln's letters, speeches, State papers, conversations which are especially significant of his character and genius, and has inserted these in a narrative that supplies the information necessary for the full understanding of their biographical and historical meaning.

BONI & LIVERIGHT are taking another long breath before their new March drive when they expect to add fifteen more titles to the Modern Library. Among them are to be Schnitzler's "Bertha Garlan"; Voltaire's "Candide"; "Irish Fairy and Folk Tales" by William Butler Yeats; "Short Stories" by Balzac; Gissing's "The Private Papers of Henry Ryecroft"; Max Beerbohm's "Zuleika Dobson"; and (a departure for the Modern Library) "The Art of Rodin" and "The Art of Aubrey Beardsley," the two last to contain over a hundred reproductions.

WITH THE THIRD volume added to the row, the Business Digest quarterlies are assuming the encyclopedic air which is appropriate to this "current business cyclopedia." The third quarterly, like the first two, consists of the material which composes the Business Digest weekly rearranged in one alphabet, so that any important business news, or legislation, or any article in the significant business periodicals of the months included can be readily found. The publishers, The Cumulative Digest Corporation, state that they can still supply a limited number of the first two quarterlies.

Under the headings of "BOOKS WANTED" and "BOOKS FOR SALE" book-trade subscribers are given under their own names five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertising for specified books, not more than one title to the line, in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding one hundred lines a year, a maximum of fifty lines under "Books Wanted" and fifty lines under "Books for Sale," and if over five lines are sent for either department in only one issue, or fifty lines for each department within the calendar year, the excess is at ten cents a line. Bills for this service will be rendered monthly. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privileges of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

"Books Wanted" must be designated by actual title, not by "any."

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Under "HELP WANTED" or for other small undisplayed advertisements, the charge is 15 cents a nonpareil line. No reduction for repeated matter. Count seven words to the line.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in FEBRUARY, 1918

This Reference List includes and classifies all books entered in the annotated Weekly Record during the past month, together with additional titles not therein listed, covering law and medicine, many government documents, university publications, pamphlets, and books of limited character. All works are here entered under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in CAPS and SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics. Under subject entries asterisks (*) designate books previously entered in the Weekly Record, in most cases with descriptive annotation.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

For books received sizes are given in caps, Q, O, D, etc.; for books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, 12°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i. e., GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.
